Dear Vince:

Thanks for your recent letter with the useful biographic information and evaluations of your four students who have applied for Agency internships. I have been in touch with the people in the Office of Personnel who run that program and have urged them to give careful consideration to the four. I have also contacted line managers in several of our research offices to pass along your evaluations of the students. These managers ultimately make the decisions about where and how to place interns, and I know that your personal input will help the students' causes.

The four are very impressive. If I were in a position directly to place them I would want to use them all. I will keep you posted if it appears that there is anything more that either of us can do.

I am sorry that I did not have the opportunity in Columbia last October to visit with you again. I thought your presentation was excellent and agreed thoroughly with your conclusions. I will be a panelist at the national ISA convention here in February, presenting a paper on CIA and its external research. I certainly hope to see you during that convention, and perhaps before. [redacted] who is working with me in academic relations now, sends his regards.

Sincerely,

[redacted]
